NEW GARDEN — On May 12, the unmistakable sounds of children laughing, therapists cheering and parents clapping will echo the walls of Theraplay, Inc.'s newest outpatient facility. Located at 385 Starr Road in Landenberg, Pennsylvania, this center will become the company's latest source of pediatric therapy completely engulfed in functional play.

Founded by pediatric physical therapist, Lisa Mackell, Theraplay, Inc. offers high-quality physical, occupational and speech therapy services for children ages birth through 21 – entirely revolved around the power of play. The scope of services has since expanded to include feeding therapy and several therapeutic group offerings, the majority of them focusing on socialization. In addition, Theraplay, Inc. is able to deliver special education services to children within their homes, as well as in a variety of educational environments. For the past 23 years, Theraplay, Inc. continues to make strides throughout the Delaware Valley by offering several large outpatient facilities each filled with teams of skilled and enthusiastic therapists and staff members.

With that said, Theraplay, Inc. continues to experience a significant demand for their pediatric services. This is attributed to their reputation, relationships with pediatricians and health-care providers, and ability to utilize the insurance benefits of their families, including medical assistance, to cover the cost of these services.

Company officials say that it is with much joy that Theraplay, Inc. is able to once again open another set of doors, giving even more parents and caregivers a chance to receive much-needed therapy services for their children. The Landenberg facility will provide therapeutic opportunities for families residing in southwest Pennsylvania, as well as parts of Delaware and Maryland. Theraplay, Inc. would like to extend an invitation to all families, doctors, teachers and practitioners in the community to please join them for this highly anticipated grand opening and continued journey to therapeutic success!
